Like all providers of personal "financial" services, I am now required by law to inform you of my policies regarding privacy of client information. As an attorney and as a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants I have and continue to be bound by professional standards of confidentiality and privacy protection that are even more stringent than those required by law. Therefore, I have always protected your right to privacy.

Type of Nonpublic Personal Information I Collect

I collect nonpublic personal information about you that is provided by you or obtained by me with your authorization.

Parties to Whom I Disclose Information

For current and former clients, I do not disclose any nonpublic personal information obtained in the course of my practice except as required or permitted by law and professional standards of confidentiality. Permitted disclosures include, for instance, providing information to my employees and in limited situations, to unrelated third parties who need to know that information to assist me in providing services to you. In all such situations, I stress the confidential nature of information being shared.

Protecting the Confidentiality and Security of Current and Former Clients' Information

I retain records relating to professional services that I provide so that I am better able to assist you with your professional needs and, in some cases, to comply with professional guidelines. In order to guard your nonpublic personal information, I maintain physical, electronic and procedural safeguards that comply with my professional standards.

Please call me if you have any questions, because your privacy, my professional ethics, and the ability to provide you with quality financial services are very important to me.

For additional information on the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act and the related federal trade commission regulations which restrict the disclosure of personal financial information, you may visit my Web site at www.hackmannlaw.com

Sincerely,

Donald O. Hackmann
